The Grub-ſtreet Journal. NUMB. 366.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1736.

INSTANCES of Actors condeſcending to give up Parts, in which they had been well received, entirely to promote the general intereſt of the Theatre.

1. THE worthy Mr. MILLS gave up the parts of Volpone, Juſtice Ballance, Cato, &c. to Mr. QUIN; and Hamlet, and Valentine Legend, to Mr. MILWARD, well knowing he could ſtill maintain his reputation by Henry the fourth, Caſſius, Sir John Bevil, &c.

2. Mr. HARPER gave up Falſtaff, Old Batchelor, Henry the Eighth, &c. to Mr. QUIN; but he ſtill gives us pleaſure in Cacafogo, Sir Tho. Reveller, Sir Harry Gubbin, Jobſon, &c.

3. Mr. SHEPARD gave up the Spaniſh Fryar to Mr. QUIN, which indeed was one of his beſt parts; yet he hath Sir Sampſon Legend, and all his other parts to pleaſe us.

4. Mr. WILLIAM MILLS hath given up the part of Bevil to Mr. QUIN, and taken that of Myrtle in the ſame Play; he hath given up ſeveral to Mr. MILWARD too: yet Mr. WILLIAM MILLS is ſo far from being injured, that on the contrary it gives him more time to ſtudy gay parts in Comedy, in which light he appears to more advantage than in ſerious parts.

5. Mr. MILLER hath parted with Abel Drugger, Squire of Alſatia, &c. to Mr. CIBBER; yet he will never loſe his intereſt, ſince 'tis known to all, he hath not his equal in the parts of Teague, Ben the ſailor, Don Cholerick, &c

6. Mrs. THURMOND has ſurrendered her part of Deſdemona to Mrs. CIBBER; not that it is to be ſuppoſed Mrs. CIBBER's judgment is the greater, or near ſo great; but merely becauſe the ſimplicity of her looks was thought to ſuit the part rather better: Mrs. THURMOND will always have her admirers, particularly in ſuch ſprightly parts as Sylvia Ballance, or in ſuch grand parts as Arpaſia in Tamerlane.

7. I ſhall take notice that Mrs. BUTLER, who ſo well ſupports the Majeſty of Q. Elizabeth, was laſt night the humble attendant of Deſdemona, in the character of Emilia, and I dare ſay none of her friends think the worſe of her ability. I will not take upon me to ſay, that the abovementioned Actors who have given up their parts, did all do it willingly; but their unwillingneſs hath not appeared in a publick manner: the conſequence of their not giving them up would be, That Mr. QUIN and Mr. MILWARD, would have been of no uſe in any acting Play, for of courſe all the parts were already filled up by the old Actors; ſo that theſe new-comers would never appear, but in a new Play, or an old revived one. I may venture to ſay, that Plays have been performed to greater perfection ſince the aforeſaid changes than before: it is the ambition even of Strollers (tho' aſhamed of their names) to inſert in their Bills that, all the parts are diſpoſed to the beſt advantage: then ſurely the Manager of a Theatre Royal will ſhew his skill in caſting the parts of the Beggars Opera, and not leave any of his beſt performers out of it. Whoever ſits next the miſtreſs of the houſe, thinks himſelf at the upper end of the table; ſo whoever ſees Mrs. CLIVE on the Stage, takes it for granted her part is the top character in the Play; therefore whatever part falls to her lot in the aforeſaid Opera, 'twill be her glory to make it the moſt ſhining one, for which reaſon (I think) all parts ſhould be indifferent to her. I am a Spectator at the Play-houſe, a ſeller of thread, pins and needles in my ſhop, and Gent'emen (of Grub-ſtreet)

Your humble ſervant,

Strand, Dec. 17. HABERDASHERUS.

P. S. As an inſtance that an indifferent Actreſs may pleaſe beyond a very good one, in ſome particular parts, I ſhall juſt mention a late converſation, where it was the opinion of moſt of the company, that Miſs BINCKS play'd Ophelia in Hamlet, better than Mrs. CLIVE; for my part I never ſaw Miſs BINCKS play Ophelia, but I have ſeen her act Phillis in the Conſcious Lovers, and I muſt own, I think ſhe comes as far behind Mrs. CLIVE in that part, as Tiddidoll is inferior to the late Mr. WILKES, in the part of Sir HARRY WILDAIR.

HORACE, Book IV. ODE V. Imitated.

To the KING.

TOO long, great Monarch! has Britannia's Iſle
Perſiſted ſad thy abſence to deplore;
Long miſs'd the ſun-ſhine of thy royal ſmile,
Long wiſh'd that every gale might waft thee o'er;
Oh then no longer let the Nation mourn,
Delay'd the bleſſings of thy hop'd return.

Juſt to our vows, auſpicious ſpeed thy way,
O Prince belov'd, thoſe kindly beams reſtore,
That rule thy ſubjects with the gentleſt ſway,
And make all hearts confeſs thy ſovereign pow'r:
As after winter blooming nature ſprings,
So after abſence ſhines the Beſt of Kings.

3.

Impatient for thy ſight, acroſs the main,
Eaſtward, to watry Belgia's ſhadowy coaſt,
Long has Britannia caſt her eyes in vain,
And griev'd, each favourable wind ſhe loſt!
Eager to thee to pay her grateful vow,
From whom her numerous bleſſings conſtant flow.

4.

For ſafe the lab'rer tills the peaceful plain,
Secure the future harveſt is his own;
The merchant ſpreads his riches o'er the main,
And pays his chearful tribute to thy throne:
And publick faith and joyful commerce join
To mark this golden age of Britain, thine.

5.

Ev'n when thy genial warmth was felt no more,
When Britain mourn'd, her great Defender gone;
Thy CAROLINA's ſoft angelic power
Supply'd the abſence of thy ſtronger ſun:
And bleſs'd we found beneath her guardian ſway,
The ſweets of Peace's ſoft continued day.

Juſtice maintain'd, and regulated law,
Freedom at home, and ſafety all around,
From thy acknowledg'd reign their ſource ſhall draw;
By theſe thy name ſhall be with glory crown'd:
And future days that beſt theſe gifts ſhall ſee,
Shall point their grateful eyes to Heaven and thee.

7.

Protected thus beneath thy watchful care,
What people like thy own, great GEORGE, is bleſt!
Nothing but for that precious life we fear,
Leſt Fate ſhould rob us of the bliſs poſſeſs'd:
Nor potent Gaul we dread, nor haughty Spain;
While thou art ſafe, they waſte their threats in vain.

8.

While the glad artiſans, and chearful ſwains,
As o'er their native land they caſt their eye,
Behold her crowded ports, and ſmiling plains,
How do their boſoms ſwell with honeſt joy!
How do they daily wiſh their King reſtor'd,
And to his ſafety crown the friendly board!

For this, when free, the ſocial bowl runs o'er,
Diſpelling fraud and care from every heart;
Thy health, of gracious Heaven, we firſt implore,
And ſpeak thy praiſe, untaught by ſervile art:
For this we point the ſparkling glaſs, and join
NASSAU's and great ELIZA's name to thine.

10.

Long live, illuſtrious Prince, our juſt delight,
Thy Britain's ſhield, the darling of mankind!
May Heaven indulgent ſoon reſtore thy ſight,
May Britain long thy happy preſence find:
And to thy godlike race devolve the power
To bleſs this land, 'till time ſhall be no more.

From the PEGASUS in Grub-ſtreet.

WE think it proper to inform the Public, that in the Memoirs of the Life, Travels and Tranſactions of the Reverend Mr. GEORGE KELLY, from his Birth to Eſcape from his Impriſonment, out of the Tower, &c. Printed for E. Curl, and conſiſting of 24 Pages, there are but 5 of new matter, unpubliſhed before. All the reſt is token out of the Report of the Committee of the House of Commons.

The Appendix, containing 32 Pages, consists of his Speech, the Lords Protest, part of the Act, inflicting pains and penalties upon him, and of his Proposals for his Translation of CICERO's Epistles to ATTICUS.

And whereas it is said in page 23, 'He had, I am assured, some concern in the Translation of Monsieur MORABIN's Histoire de l'Exile de CICERON': we have been assured by a Gentleman, who formerly asked him about it, that he declared he never had any concern in it at all. And yet this Book Mr. Curl has now republished under a new title, puffing it at the end of his Advertisement, as 'An Enquiry into the Life and Writings of Cicero, including the History of his Banishment. By Mr. Kelly. Price 5 s.'

To recommend these Genuine Memoirs to all lovers of lewd stories, part of the Advertisement runs thus. 'His Transactions while in France (wherein, among many other remarkable Particulars are, 1. A Detection of the Dutchess de Retz's Intrigues, for which she was banished the Court. 2. The Daughter's Amours with a Gallant of her Mother's procuring. 3. Twelve young Gentlemen of Distinction taken in the Act of Sodomy,) and his Arrival in England in 1722.'

The Account of all his Transactions in France, and of his Arrival in England, is contained in 22 lines in the 3d and 4th Pages: and all the remarkable Particulars of Intrigues, Amours, and Sodomy, promised in this long Parenthesis, are very succinctly told in Page 16th, in the 10 following lines, being part of a Letter from J. T. printed before. 'We have strange news here from Versailles, the Dutchess of De Retz is banished from Court for a little Adultery, and for endeavouring to procure her Daughter-in law, Madame D'Alincourt, for the Duke De Richlieu, her own quondam favourite. He too, with a string of Ten or Twelve Pathics, the chief young Nobility of the Kingdom, since taken in that abominable Fact, are all banished to several Parts, except One, who is sent to the Bastile for three years.'

Tho' we much admire Mr. Curl's ingenuity in drawing up Title pages, Advertisements and Puffs, in which he far excells all his Brethren, who are frequently constrained to hire his assistance; yet we are a little apprehensive, lest he should by this disappointment have disobliged his very best customers, the purchasers of Cases of Impotency and Divorce, Rape, Sodomy, &c. &c. &c. &c.

As to the testimony added, These Memoirs, &c. are truly genuine, and if any other Account appears it is spurious, &c. H. DUNCOMB: Mr. Conundrum is of opinion, that there is a mistake in the name, and that it should have been DUNCECOMB.

VERSES occasioned by reading the Gazetteer of Saturday Dec. 11.

IF naughty CALEB praise Queen BESS,
As Popish Craftsmen us'd to call her;
Immediately her fame grows less,
And Gazetteer begins to maul her.

2.

'She an Example! DANVERS, fie!
'What stories strange you tell us?
'She'd bully people, God knows why,
'And take advice of High-church fellows.

3.

'Imprison Commons for a speech,
'And use as scurvily the Peers;
'Sometimes she'd bid them kiss her breech,
'And sometimes too she'd box their ears.

4.

'If her affairs went well 'twas chance;
'Her subjects too were monstrous civil:
'Twas thus, she Holland sav'd and France,
'And beat the Spaniards to the Devil.

5.

'But if a pack of grumbling Varlets,
'Will never let good Folks be quiet;
'What can be done for sons of Harlots,
'Who are for ever running riot?

6.

Then prithee CALEB burn thy tools,
And scribble no more silly stuff:
The OUTS are always Knaves and Fools;
The INS are wise and good enough.

An Extract of a Letter from Hanover. The sudden death of the two last Dukes of Wolfenbuttel, and the small space of time between that of the one and the other, have occasion'd suspicions that their deaths were not natural, which have been heighten'd by some circumstances that have since happen'd. After much secret enquiry, discovery has been made of the most execrable plot that human malice ever invented, The design, having been of five years standing, was to entirely destroy by poison the reigning house of Brunswick-Wolfenbuttel. The last Dukes have been the fatal victims of this infernal project. The execution of it had been finish'd on the reigning Duke, if providence had not kindly interpos'd, and manifested its justice by the discovery of so black a design. There are about thirty-six persons in this confederacy, at the head of whom is one Baron Wolff, who has been several years at the Court of Brunswick. He was immediately conducted to the Tower of Hartz, where he is strictly guarged, and strongly iron'd, The greatest part of his accomplices are taken; some have made their escape. The Duke has appointed Commissaries to prepare process against these criminals. It is not doubted but the greatest part will be punish'd with death. M. Boetger, Privy-Counsellor to the Duke, has been several times at the Tower of Hartz, to interrogate the Baron, who seeing his crimes discover'd, has confess'd the whole; his confession gives horror to every body who sees it. *DA. And ſpeedily will begin to be publiſh'd,

The entire Tranſlation (illuſtrated with all the Cuts and Maps in the Original in 64 Copper Plates)

A DESCRIPTION of CHINA and CHINESE TARTARY, with Korea and Tibet, containing the Geography, and Hiſtory, as well Natural as Civil, of thoſe Countries; lately publiſhed at Paris by Pere du Halde, Jeſuit, in four Volumes Folio, and to be brought into two in Engliſh; with ſeveral neceſſary Improvements by the Tranſlator, as ſpecified in the plan of this Work, 6000 of which having been diſperſed, we refer thereto.

This Book will be delivered by E. Cave at St. John's Gate, according to the Orders already receiv'd, or to be received, either in Monthly Numbers, 20 Sheet each at half a Crown, or 8 Sheets every Fortnight at one Shilling, or may be had at the Bookſellers in Town and Country, who are deſired to ſend an Account what Numbers they ſhall want.

No Money to be paid till the Sheets are delivered, except a Guinea for the Royal Paper, of which no more will be printed than ſubſcribed for; half a Guinea Advance-Money for ſuch as deſire to have it only in Volumes.

The Undertaker having more at Heart the publiſhing a compleat Edition of this valuable Work for the Benefit of the publick, than ſeeking Employment (which he does not want) or than the View of profit, he having publickly offered to reſign this Work to his Opponent, is willing to alter the firſt Propoſals to the liking of ſeveral Subſcribers, who think the Scheme for giving 50 l. for the Encouragement of Artiſts impracticable, notwithſtanding the Undertaker has already given away one Sum of 50 l. and another of 5 l. according to Propoſals, and has had the Honour of propoſing a Gold Medal, of 10 l. (the Dies for which will coſt near 30 l.) and alſo another Set of Prizes to the amount of above 40 l. which will moſt certainly be paid in a ſhort Time. Inſtead therefore of the former diſapprov'd Scheme of 50 l. he is adviſed to give ten five Pounds to ſuch Subſcribers as they ſhall by Lot fall to. But he is willing to do more: he will be ready to give the whole Profits of the Undertaking to fall by Lot among the firſt 1000 Subſcribers; which profits, if Encouragements offer, may produce 50 or 100 five pounds; or if it be thought proper to make only a few Lots of five pounds, and divide the reſt into Lots of two or three pounds, there may be a fortunate Lot to every 5 or 6 Subſcribers.

By this Means great part of the Subſcribers, beſides having a Book the full Value of the purchaſe Money, will have a Chance to gain the Whole, or double the Sums they diſburſe, and the Undertaker, if this Method ſucceeds, will be ſecured from Loſs, which is chiefly his Aim, he having 50 and 50 Inſtances to produce, wherein his Publications have been printed upon him, before a Day, a Week, a Month, hath paſſed, to his great Loſs and Diſappointment.

If any Books remain unſold, at the Concluſion of the Work, they ſhall be put to Sale by Auction, and the produce applied, with the other profits, to the Benefit of the fortunate Claimants, the Undertaker deſiring nothing more than the Charges of Printing, Engraving, and Intereſt of Money to be deducted, as far as ſhall be thought reaſonable by the worthy Society for Encouraging Learning. (See Gentleman's Magazine for June, p. 353.)

The Fortunate Claimants to be determined by the Numbers of their Tickets, being drawn againſt ſuch Lots by the mathematical Engines, for which purpoſe Tickets, to the Number of 1000, will be delivered to thoſe who continue to take the Work in parts as it comes out, or who ſhall pay half a Guinea Subſcription Money, and take the firſt, and then the ſecond Volume in the ſame manner.

N. B. The Octavo Edition not anſwering the Expectation of the Publick, becauſe of the many Omiſſions, falſe Tranſlations and other Defects, * eſpecially regarding the Maps, the Geography, and Names of places, the Publication of the above Folio Edition will be entered upon the Beginning of January, without fail.

See Grub-ſtreet Journal, Dec. 9, and of this Day.
